Once, as a child, when the Chinese National Wushu Team 中国国家武术队 (zhōngguó guójiā wǔshù duì) went to perform for President Richard Nixon in the United States, Li was asked by Nixon to be his personal bodyguard.

Li replied, "I don't want to protect any individual. When I grow up, I want to defend my one billion Chinese countrymen!"

queue 辫子 biànzi

Origin

- The queue or cue is a hairstyle 发型 (fǎxíng) worn by Han Chinese and others under Manchu rule in the 17th century. It was later required to be worn by male subjects of Qing Dynasty 清朝 (qīngcháo).
- Hair on top of the scalp is grown long and is often braided, while the front portion of the head is shaved.

Resistance

- Initially there was resistance to wear queue (nicknamed “pigtail”), opinions about the queue did change over time.
- Traditionally, adult Han Chinese did not cut their hair for philosophical and cultural reasons. According to Confucius ideology, we owe our body to our parents and we ought not to damage it in the name of filial piety 孝顺 (xiàoshùn).

*"We are given our body, skin and hair from our parents;
which we ought not to damage."*

中国朝代 zhōngguó chádài

- Chinese history is divided into dynasties - period whereby the country is ruled by one royal family 王室成员 (wángshì chéngyuán).
